1940'S RADIO SHOW

A big band remote (a.k.a. dance band remote) was a remote broadcast, popular on radio during the 1930s and 1940s, involving a coast-to-coast live transmission of a big band.

Broadcasts were usually transmitted by the major radio networks directly from hotels, ballrooms, restaurants and clubs. During World War II, the remote locations expanded to include military bases and defense plants.

Band remotes mostly originated in major cities, including Boston, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Chicago.

The usual procedure involved the network sending a two-man team, announcer and engineer, with remote radio equipment to a designated location. The announcer would open with music behind an introduction: For your dancing pleasure, Columbia brings you the music of Count Basie and his Orchestra, coming to you from the Famous Door on Fifty-Second Street in New York City."

BANDS

Count Basie	Woody Herman	Earl Hines
Duke Ellington	Coon-Sanders Original	Kay Kyser
Jan Garber	Nighthawk Orchestra	Artie Shaw

City Rhythm Big Band was formed in 2005 by Dale Bevier in Loxley, AL. With the traditional 17-piece format, the band was started to renew and maintain interest in the classic swing band music of the 30s and 40s. The City Rhythm Big Band continues its regular, well-attended monthly dances at the Loxley Community Center during the Winter/Spring season.

Their repertoire includes music from the band masters of the Swing era (Glenn Miller, the Dorseys, Duke Ellington and Count Basie) and songs arranged in the Big Band style from the contemporary songbook by artists like Michael Bublé, Billy Joel and Pharrell Williams.

TAKILLYA SUNRISE . FOUNDER

Takillya has over 20 years of dance experience - ballet, tap, jazz and ballroom. Her performances are both sultry and energetic. A California girl who grew up as a Navy brat who loves traveling, listening to timeless jazz records, wearing pinup/vintage clothing, Takillya adores being in the spotlight anytime and anywhere!

GINGER GRENADE

Ginger got her start dancing in musical theatre. She's performed ballroom, swing and modern dance. In addition to her show biz ventures, Ginger is a culinary director and enjoys the finer things in life, such as great wine, traveling, fashion and, of course, very, very rich men. Any takers? Call her at 1.800.HOT.STUFF!

UNCLE HENRY

Weekdays mornings from 5-9, as the man running the board of News Radio 710's award-winning Uncle Henry Show, he fields calls from his regulars, juggles traffic, weather, news and market reports. Uncle Henry has hosted Gulf Coast radio and television shows for years, expressing his opinions on local issues (Ann Street potholes), sports ("ROLL TIDE ROLL"), politics ("I miss Reagan!") and more. He's no stranger to radio remotes and is honored to emcee his first-ever Jazz Jambalaya.
