WILLIAM "BILL" JOHN EVANS
 Musician . Composer . Arranger

Born: 16 August 1929| Plainfield, NJ
 Died: 15 September 1980| New York, NY

Intuition has to lead knowledge,
 but it can't be out there alone.

Technique is the ability to translate your ideas into sound through your instrument. This is a comprehensive technique...a feeling for the keyboard that will allow you to transfer any emotional utterance into it. What has to happen is that you develop a comprehensive technique and then say, Forget that. I'm just going to be expressive through the piano.

I dance because it makes me want to explode.

Bill Evans

To the person who uses music as a medium for the expression of ideas, feelings, images, or what have you; anything which facilitates this expression is properly his instrument.

It bugs me when people try to analyze jazz as an intellectual theorem. It's not. It's feeling.

Perhaps it is a peculiarity of mine that despite the fact that I am a professional performer, it is true that I have always preferred playing without an audience.

I went through a lot of mental pains and anguish about choosing between jazz and classical. I realized that where I functioned was where I should be, and where I functioned was in jazz, so that was it.

Bill Evans

MICHAEL PELLERA
 New Orleans Center for Creative Arts

Assistant Chair
 Jazz Piano and Composition
 Jazz Combos

After studying at Berklee College of Music, Peller has been a jazz educator in New Orleans since 1989. Before joining NOCCA's faculty in 2002, he taught jazz piano and improvisation at Loyola University. Peller's music is described as having "a unique perspective that draws freely from the influences of New Orleans and New York", the two cities he's lived in for the past 25 years. As a composer, he has created a body of work that encompasses modern jazz harmony, indigenous New Orleans rhythms, and elements of the classic American songbook of the 30's & 40's.

Among his former students are Brian Blade, Jon Cowherd, Jonathan Batiste, Troy "Trombone Shorty" Andrews, Rich Vogel and others who have created distinguished careers for themselves with artists like Herbie Hancock, Wayne Shorter, Wynton Marsalis, Liz Wright, Joni Mitchell, Lenny Kravitz and Galactic.
